

INPUT REDIRECTION

Abstract of the Disclosure

A computer method for redirecting input messages to an application that has at least one window redirected is provided. The method intercepts input messages, determines if the input messages are directed at the redirected application, and transforms the input messages to correspond to the actual location of the window that has been redirected before the input message is redirected to the application that has had at least one of its windows redirected.

10